

FREEDOM!!!

Four Hundred Years of Freedom to own and read the Holy Bible

Dear Friend, I'm excited about a book I've been reading - the Holy Bible also known as the King James Bible (KJB).

In England, the common people have been reading the scriptures since John Wycliffe translated the Latin Vulgate into English in the 12th century. The Latin Vulgate is a corrupt source but Wycliffe did his best given the constraints placed upon him. After all, this was the Dark Ages where Europe was deprived of the Received Text, received by believers from the Apostles uncorrupted. Also, many people could not afford to obtain these hand-written copies and the Roman Catholic Church ruled England at the time, so the scriptures were read to gatherings of people in secluded locations away from the persecuting megalomaniacal clergy of the Roman Church.

In the 14th century, because of unrest in the Middle East (sound familiar?), the Received Text was brought to Europe by fleeing Christian scholars and Desiderius Erasmus collated these manuscripts into a Greek New Testament. William Tyndale determined that the Word of God should be available to everybody, so he translated Erasmus' Greek New Testament into the English language. Now a double blessing came to the English people because not only had they at last obtained the Received Text in English but also the printing press greatly reduced the cost of production, so many more families could obtain a copy of the Holy Bible. Erasmus was charged with heresy but not convicted due to his ability to sidestep his accusers. Tyndale was murdered for translating the Holy Bible. Here's a song written about 50 million other souls who were murdered also:

In England, it was still some time before the people could read the Holy Bible without fear of harassment from the king or the clergy. But when Elizabeth 1 became queen in 1558, the people were free at last to read the Holy Bible pretty much unhindered. Total freedom came later in 1689 for non-conformist protestants of which I am one.

This year (2011), being the 400th anniversary of the first printing of the King James Bible on 2nd May, 1611, I am thankful for the freedom from tyranny which I have enjoyed as a descendant of the English people who 400 years ago had a deep heart-felt love for the Word of God. As a consequence, Great Britain led the world in religious, social and political reforms. The English people's faithfulness to God made Britain great, and later her former colony, the United States of America also shared in this greatness for the same reasons. (Here are two principles my forefathers embraced: Jn 8:32 and Eph 5:11).

Sadly, this is not the case today and we are pressed in on many fronts (just like ancient Israel, but that's another story) because of apostasy and ignorance. Today, the history of England and the Holy Bible are hardly known and definitely not appreciated by educationalists. Here's the Battle for the Bible and a Father's Love Letter:

By the way, for those who feel compelled to challenge my public reading of the Holy Bible, be they Mohammedans, Freemasons, Mormans or Jehovah's Witnesses, amongst others, of whom, by the way, most were covertly established by the Roman Catholic Church to counter believers and the Received Text, let me recommend to you Jesus Christ, Lord of all, 'author and finisher of the faith' (Heb 12:2), and ultimately, author of the Holy Bible (Jn 1:1), of which they have been so intensely concerted to destroy.

Here's one of my favourite quotes, I hope you like it: John Foxe describes an argument with a "learned" but "blasphemous" clergyman, who had asserted to Tyndale that, "We had better be without God's laws than the Pope's." Swelling with emotion, Tyndale responded: "I defy the Pope, and all his laws; and if God spares my life, ere many years, I will cause the boy that driveth the plow to know more of the Scriptures than thou dost!" Circa 1520.

Here's a challenge for you. Find a Holy Bible and read it this year. You'll be so glad you did. Check out these links for selection of and aid to reading the Holy Bible:

If you prefer to listen to the bible, Alexander Scourby is the best:

In conclusion: I reject the new reformation, dominionism, futurism, ecumenism, the charismatic movement and worldliness. All I ask is freedom to believe and practise my religion and I accord you the same, although I'm a realist (2Tim 3:12). A definition of heresy is one who chooses. Jesus said "let them alone" (Mat 15:14). I love everyone, especially the Bishop of Rome and his followers (Rev 13:3). But he's not my Father (Mat 23:9), and he's not Holy (Rom 3:23). Don't believe his many extravagant claims for himself (Dan 7:25), but rather, believe in God's Holy Word. Please cease supporting this power or you will one day face God's Holy Retribution (Rev 14:10). It's your call. I welcome refugees as every Christian should (Mat 5:7). Jesus said "My Kingdom is not of this world" (Jn 18:36). Why do 99% of Christians practise the opposite? Here's a clue: Isaiah 4:1. Finally, read Jn 3:16-21.

"Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." (Lk 12:32)

Amen.
